

METRO

Racist brute tries to remove Asian nurse from subway car: cops

By Tina Moore

May 4, 2020 | 12:09pm | Updated

An image of the alleged attacker

A racist brute hurled anti-Asian threats at a male nurse in Manhattan, grabbing his wrist and trying to physically remove him from a subway car, police and sources said.

“Hey Chinaman, you’re infected,” the hater spewed at the victim, according to cops. “You need to move to a different car. I’m going to beat this Chinese n—r up.”

The attacker was on the northbound 4 train around 5:30 a.m. Sunday when he approached the stranger and began the barrage, cops said. The victim was identified by police sources as a nurse of Filipino descent.

During the melee, the man grabbed the victim by the wrist and tried to eject him from the subway car, cops said.

The hate-monger was described as Hispanic, standing about 5-foot-8 and weighing about 180 lbs. Photos and videos released by cops show him wearing an LA Dodgers cap and a black, waist-length jacket.

5/9/2020

Racist brute tries to remove Asian nurse from subway car: cops

The case is being investigated by the NYPD Hate Crimes Task Force, cops said.

FILED UNDER

ASIAN-AMERICAN, CORONAVIRUS IN NY, HATE CRIME, HATE CRIMES, RACISM, 5/4/20